

Buskers' a hit with young and old

Bertolt the Explorer was pulling volunteers into the centre of his circle to act out the story of the golden hanky while he narrated.

"I'm looking for someone who's been really evil, who is hideous and disgusting," says Bertolt as he pulls a middle-aged man from the audience into the ring.

Bertolt outfits his victim with a hat made from a long, pink balloon and a stick-on hook nose.

Three-year-old Benjamin Raslovetzky, who was also in the audience, faced the "troll" with a pink balloon sword in one hand. At Bertolt's cue, Raslovetzky started to pummel the troll with his deflatable weapon.

Shrieks of glee emanated from the audience.

Children and parents can laugh together at outrageously funny street performers